

PIERRE TACKLES TRAFFIC FROM A NEW ANGLE

FOUR WHEELS? WHO NEEDS 'EM? Daredevil Pierre demonstrates his novel approach on London's Albert Bridge Pictures: KEN LENNOX

How to beat the rush hour

By NIC NORTH

TRAFFIC jams are enough to put anyone on edge — but that can be an advantage.

Daring Pierre Marie proved it yesterday with a mobile balancing act on London's Albert Bridge.

"By driving in zees way I occupy less of your road space and ease ze flow," he said later.

Ramp

"Eef everyone drove like zees, your M25 problems would be solved because you could 'ave an extra four lanes in each direction."

As the stunt star from France crossed the Thames he was watched by his wife Isabelle and toddler son Alex.

"Zey refuse to get in a car wiz me," he told on-lookers afterwards, to nobody's surprise.

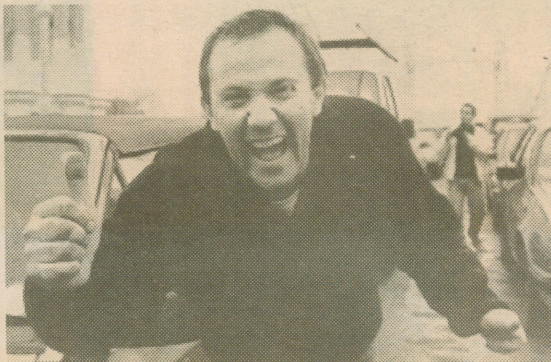

Pierre's two-wheel trick started from a ramp positioned by colleagues with the "alternative" Circus Archaos, which opened last night at Battersea Wharf.

Pierre did not seek police permission for his publicity act, said a Scotland Yard spokesman.

If there had been any complaints he might have been run in. At full tilt.

TILT-UP AREA: Frenchman Pierre Marie hits the busy streets of London

UPRIGHT CITIZEN: Pierre after his river crossing